You can't write on a read-only drive. Again, read the previous comment about using third-party cleaners to do this. There are a lot of blogs talking about this problem. If it is on an external drive, then it is the best option, as this has a lot of room. For example, let's say your hard drive capacity is 30 GB, and you would want to download an app that was 3 GB. You would need to delete everything and download a new app instead. (3 GB new software, 30 GB remaining space, hence 3 GB cannot be downloaded. This is just an example, but you get the idea. Now, if you are downloading a big file or an application that has to be stored for offline use, then you need to use the external drive. You can even split them up to use two external drives at once! Still, make sure that you are downloading applications on a Windows computer and to a drive that is not attached to a Mac! Let me know if you have any other questions. It was mainly this issue that was keeping us from upgrading to Windows 10. After deleting your content and re-downloading an updated version, you will have no more issues with your Windows update.
